Last summer, my family and I took a trip to the local zoo. We learned about a gaggle of geese that lives there. The zoo took in the geese, because they were injured in a terrible storm. My favorite part of going to the zoo was watching the pride of lions. They actually were quite playful! We also made friends with a family of five who we kept seeing throughout the day.

I remember my first field trip like it was yesterday. My classmates, teacher, and I visited a farm. Once we arrived, a team of horses pulled us on a hay wagon to the barn. In the barn we got to feed an entire flock of sheep, even the cute little babies! Next, we witnessed a herd of cattle being fed and milked. I will never forget one particular part of that field trip—my best friend and I collected small bundles of sticks in our pockets throughout the visit. We kept them as souvenirs!

Last week my teacher told us that we could study any animal habitat for the next week of science class. I decided to research ocean life, and I learned a lot! Did you know that a group of fish is called a school of fish? A pod of whales travels together, usually searching for food or warmer water. Two or more squids are called a shoal of squids. By far my favorite group of animals I learned about is a rookery of penguins. To me they are the most like humans and the most entertaining!
